COUNTY EAGLES WILL ENTERTAIN AT CONVENTION

The Fraternal Order of Eagles of California will entertain the Grand Convention of the order in San Francisco during the week of August 11 to 16, inclusive. There will be between forty and fifty thousand visitors here for the occasion. Many elaborate plans have been made for this entertainment. One of the features of the convention will be the colorful parade to be held on Thursday at noon. Aeries from as far east as Newark, N. J., have arranged for floats, and from the last report of the parade committee, there will be over one hundred floats in the parade.

Hotels have been receiving reservations for the past two months and the organizing department says it will be the largest parade in the history of the order, and that is saying something, for New York boasted of that feat a few years ago. It is the spirit of San Francisco and California—the state and city that knows how.

A noteworthy fact concerning the convention is that the Grand Worthy President is a Californian, Charles J. Chenu, of Sacramento. It is the purpose of California Eagles to show the Nation what we think of Eagledom, and also the appreciation we have of one of our sons to be its national leader.

San Mateo County Association of Eagles have made elaborate plans in keeping with the celebration. They have established headquarters at the Whitcomb Hotel, and invite all citizens of the county to make it their headquarters while in the city during that week. An attendant will be on hand at all times, and you are urged, especially during the day of the parade, to use it as a lounging room and meeting place for your friends.

The Association also has a float under construction that will symbolize the predominant product of San Mateo county—a huge basket of flowers. This will be some 5x10 feet in dimension and will be conveyed on a decorated truck. There is a contest for the most beautiful float, and the Association asks that the citizens of San Mateo county attend the parade and give their moral support to this undertaking.

The championship drum corps of Daly City will be in the parade and will compete for the prize against the best drum corps of the country. The Newark, N. J., corps has had the distinction of being the most colorful and best drilled for the past few years, but Daly City has not been able to compete in the east, so it will be well worth the price of a long journey to watch these crack drum corps go through their intricate maneuvers for the benefit of the crowd and judges.

The Association will march as a unit and has adopted a uniform of white and green. Over one hundred have shown their willingness to join in the parade in uniform, and anyone wishing to join should get in touch with one of the local officers.

Daly City will send as delegates Brothers A. J. Bodien B. J. Adams, Larry Shaw and Otto Schramm, together with William Bolger as Past President and Ed Heim as the present President.

South San Francisco will have a drum corps and a drill team in the parade, and competition is reaching an acute stage, as the little city to the south has a determination to do things in a big way and promise to surprise those whose hopes are the highest.

Redwood City has a band that will make the judges sit up and take notice when prizes are awarded in that line.

San Mateo county can justly be proud of the entries they have in the parade, and much credit is due those that have striven to do their best in time and energy to make the entries the success that is sure to follow.

A. GEHRINGER INJURED BY RECKLESS DRIVER

While George Putney and Adolphus Gehringer, of Woodrow street, were on their way to work on Thursday of last week, traveling on the Junipero Serra boulevard their machine was struck by another car. As a result of the accident Mr. Gehringer is still confined to his bed, and the Putney machine is a wreck. Mr. Putney, however, escaped without injury.

LOCAL HUNTER BAGS DEER

Frank B. McDermott, of Templeton avenue, motored to Tracy on Thursday of last week, to be out early deer hunting the next day. Friday he brought down the first deer to be brought to Daly City, and the lucky sportsman fired but one shot.

NO REASON FOR MAKING CHANGE

The late Chief Justice Beatty was a firm believer in representative government, often saying to an intimate friend:

"Select the highest type of men available for office, and after selecting them hold them responsible for conducting the afafirs for the benefit of the community."

The dictum of Judge Beatty is apt indeed in present circumstances. We are called upon to cast our ballots on Tuesday, August 26, for candidates for county and township officers. We should bend every effort to see that we vote for "the highest type of men available." That is our bounden duty.

The problem in San Mateo county is not so difficult, after all. Those in office at the present time fulfill in every respect the requirements of the offiicals we are seeking. There is no reason for making even one change. Retain the County Clerk, the Sheriff, the Coroner, the Surveyor, the Justices of the Peace that have done their work "for the benefit of the community."

If we knew of any plausible reasons for putting in new men, we can say without hesitation that the new men would be favored. But the officials now holding power have not disappointed us in all the years they have carried heavy responsibilities. Let's not make any changes, not even one. There is no occasion for running the risk of supplanting conscientious officials with any other kind.

The story has gone the rounds of a Congressman who voted against every item of the tariff bill and on the final call voted for the bill as a whole. That's the type of official to be avoided at any cost. A man without any stability of character or mind cannot be of any benefit to the commonwealth. We must have men capable of thinking out the best course to pursue in whatever contingency and then following that course in an unflinching manner.

Why should we worry about county affairs? Intelligent voting removes all that trouble. We have to make our living, and if possible, have a few hours now and then for recreation and amusement, and perhaps, even for THOUGHT. This is a machine age, it is true, but it should never be forgotten that man is the only thinking machine. The philosophers tell us that thougth is life. We can't all be Emanuel Kants and formulate systems of philosophy, but with ample time we are capable of more than ordinary mental effort.

Tuesday, August 26, is near at hand. On that day, friends, remember that it is your privilege to assert your sovereignty, for every voter is a sovereign in a democracy, and to make that sovereignty sure by returning to office all of the incumbents.

INTEREST GROWS IN LOCAL MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION

There was an unusually interesting meeting of the Daly City Merchants' Association held last Wednesday evening at the City Hall. There was the usual large attendance, and although the expected speakers did not arrive, there was plenty of jazz among the home talent, and the meeting was enlivened by spirited arguments on subjects varying from the collection of garbage and water charges to the coming Christmas celebration, and all who wished to speak were given the opportunity to do so.

The proposed license ordinance was up again and complaint was made of the unfairness to Daly City tradesmen in allowing outsiders to come in and take the work without paying full license.

Councilman Bodien was present and asked the co-operation of the Association in the coming Christmas celebration.

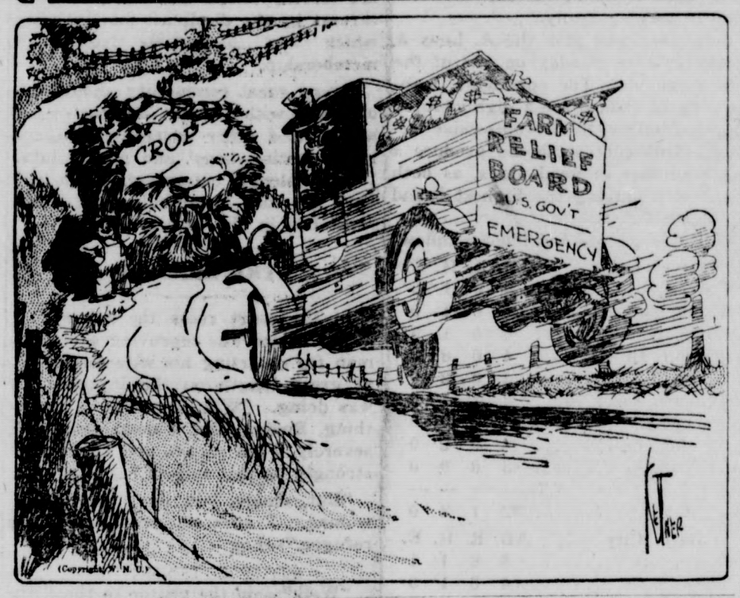
It is proposed to have Mission street brilliantly lighted with variegated electric lights for at least three weeks before Christmas and decorated with evergreens, and to interest the people in their own town during the holidays, instead of letting them be enticed down to San Francisco. A great celebration at the City Hall will be held, with a band concert and exercises by the schools and fire department.

The manager of the Daly City Theatre appeared at the meeting and asked the merchants to send a representative to the grand opening of the theatre on Thursday night, and after some discussion the Merchants' Association appointed Recording Secretary W. H. Clay to be their spokesman at the opening, and it was also decided to send a floral piece consisting of a good luck horseshoe as a token of the good wishes of the Association for the success of the theatre.

It was decided to have refreshments at the next meeting.

W. H. CLAY, Recording Secretary.

A Hurry Call



JEFFERSON HIGH OPENS MONDAY

Everything is in readiness at the Jefferson Union high school for the boys and girls of Daly City and Colma and the rest of the district to start school on next Monday morning.

Mr. Kollenbaum, the janitor, has been working throughout the vacation, mopping floors and cleaning windows and woodwork, and has the building looking spick and span.

Jimmie, the gardener, has the grounds looking better than they ever looked before. The lawns are green and the shrubbery is in fine condition. The beds of marigolds, straw flowers, etc., among the shrubbery, planted this year for the first time, add to the appearance of the entire grounds, a colorful touch that is pleasing.

During the vacation Principal James Ferguson visited the universities and the different teacher placement bureaus in the search for teachers to fill the vacancies in the faculty. Over seventy candidates were interviewed. In addition he has completed the schedule of recitations for each class and the assignment of work for each member of the faculty in the several departments of the school.

During the past two weeks Miss Gibbins, the new librarian, has been getting the textbooks into shape for distribution on the opening day of school.

The new term will begin on next Monday morning, August 11, at 8:15 o'clock. All of the old students will register at that time, and during the forenoon they will enroll in their classes. Textbooks will be given out and recitations arranged for the next day.

The incoming freshman class and all other new students will register at one o'clock. They will first meet in the auditorium, where they will be given instruction regarding registration and the work of the several departments of the school. The program of each student will be made out and textbooks distributed so that school work may begin immediately.

Pirncipal James Ferguson again earnesly requests that all students register on the first day. He says that students who enter late are the ones who invariably are the failures at the end of the term. Those who do not enroll on the first day find themselves behind the rest of the class and have work to make up. This, he says, is very seldom accomplished and the great majority of these students are behind in their work all the remainder of the term, ending in failure and disappointment for themselves and their parents and the teachers.

Some boys and girls, and some parents, too, think that the first few days of school do not count. This, Mr. Ferguson says, is a very great mistake, for during these first days explanations of the work are given and rules are learned that are absolutly necessary for pupils to know. Late comers are always handicapped. So he advises and earnestly requests all pupils of the high school to register on the first day of the new term—next Monday, August 11.

SURPRISE SHOWER IN HONOR OF MISS EVELYN MOHR

Miss Evelyn Mohr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mohr, of Whittier street, who will be the bride of Mr. Robert Bemis, was honored with a surprise shower given by Miss Edith Taylor at her home, 166 Peoria street, on Thursday evening of last week. Miss Taylor's home was beautifully decorated in pink and green. A homemade green parasol with pink streamers and base formed the centerpiece of the table. A motion picture announcing the engagement of Miss Mohr and Mr. Bemis was shown for those who had not previously seen it. Miss Mohr was the recipient of many lovely gifts. The guests were: Misses Lucile Krause, Nola Landucci, Ines MacDowell, Gertrude Luhman, Terry McCaffrey, Amelia Ellena, Lorraine Buckley and Evelyn Vince; Mesdames Gertrude Boran, Bernice Gunderson, Rose Taylor, Margie Taylor, Eleanor Goldstone, Edna Rogers and Rose Mohr.

ATTORNEY FAVORS THE ZONING PLAN

Appearing before the San Mateo county board of supervisors, meeting last Monday in Redwood City, District Attorney Franklin Swart urged members of the board to consider the adoption of planning and zoning ordinances for the county, and the appointment of a planning commission to administer the ordinance. He said that the time was near when San Mateo county, owing to its rapid growth and close proximity to San Francisco, would need such a protective measure.

District Attorney Swart urged the planning measure following discussion of a plumbing ordinance for the county. He condemned the plumbing ordinance as class legislation, and urged the supervisors not to adopt such measures until a whole program of planning had been worked out. He urged the supervisors to study plans adopted by Santa Barbara and other counties before going into the planning scheme.

District Attorney Swart praised County Surveyor George A. Kneese, whom he said was practically the only one in the county who had endeavored to bring order out of chaos in the present development plans in various sections. The district attorney said that Surveyor Kneese had attempted to keep new subdivisions in harmony with a general scheme of development so that the county would not be hopelessly tangled when a planning ordinance was adopted in the future.

At the conclusion of his talk, District Attorney Swart warned political candidates that he would call them to account for any political advertising placed along the county highways. With this statement, the board adopted a resolution ordering a county employe to go about the county and tear down all advertising of any nature found on county property.

Fred Drake, president of the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce, announced to the board that the chamber would have a float in the parade at the American Legion convention in Sacramento on August 18. Mr. Drake also said that the San Mateo county Boy Scout band would march in the parade. He cited the work done in behalf of securing the Western Pacific for San Mateo county and urged all residents to co-operate with the new line.

A budget calling for $19,300 was presented to the supervisors for the County Chamber of Commerce, and was referred to the auditor.

J. W. Coleberd presented a petition to the board on behalf of the South San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, calling on the board to refuse any applications for hog ranch permits in the South San Francisco area.

Fire Chiefs W. J. Dessin, Burlingame, Hugh F. Morris, San Mateo, and Edward J. Wheeler, San Carlos, reported to the board that after investigation of the fire haards at Canyon sanitarium, they suggested that the place be cleared of dry grass and debris and certain other changes made to better protect patients housed there. A more adequate supply of water was held necessary to fight fire.

LOCAL THEATRE OPENS TO PUBLIC

The Daly City Theatre, which has been closed for several weeks, undergoing material improvements, was again thrown open to the public on Thursday, August 7.

A most satisfying attendance was recorded on this occasion, and each and every one fortunate enough to witness the reopening of this popular theatre was most favorabley impressed with the improvements that had been made during the brief period since the doors were closed in order to complete the work.

In addition to other noticeable improvements, a new balcony has been installed, thus enlarging the seating capacity of the Daly City to 1,500.

The latest Western Electric sound system has been installed, insuring a tonal quality of the latest and best pictures that will compare favorably with the highest class theatres in the country. There are many other improvements noticeable that should add to the prestige of this theatre.

The Daly City Theatre is now being operated by the Golden State Theatre Circuit, being recently leased for a period of fifteen years from the Jefferson Theatre Corporation. Mr. G. F. Covel, well and favorably known in this section, and who has been connected with the Golden State Theatre Corporation for over ten years, is the manager of the Daly City Theatre, and promises to give the people of Daly City and vicinity the very best in entertainment at all times.

The writer believes that after you have attended a performance at the Daly City Theatre, observed the most pleasing appearance and comfort of your surroundings, and listened to the splendid programs, you will be convinced that it is unnecessary to leave Daly City to secure satisfying entertainment.

The Golden State Theatre Circuit officials and Mr. Covel are to be congratulated upon the improvements made at this splendid show house.

FORMER RESIDENT SLAIN BY ROBBERS

While his wife and daughter were visiting at Redwood City, Walter Mathias, 67, San Francisco cafe man, was slain last Monday in a rear room of his cafe at 3199 Nineteenth street, San Francisco, and the cash register was rifled. Mathias was found by Emil Rosaia, wagon driver, in a blood-stained room, where he had been struck a terrific blow which fractured his skull. Chairs were overturned and there were other signs of a desperate struggle. Mathias passed away an hour later in the hospital, without having regained consciousness.

Mrs. Rena Mathias, the widow, and her daughter Alice have been spending the summer at the home of Mrs. Carrie Storm, 712 Fulton street, Redwood City, where they were informed of the tragedy. Mrs. Mathias and Miss Alice are well known in Daly City through their connection with El Carmelo Parlor, Native Daughters of the Golden West. Mr. and Mrs. Mathias were old residents of Daly City, having resided here for many years.

AUTOMOBILE CRASHES INTO A STREET CAR

A Market Street Railway car, going north on Mission street last Wednesday morning at 3 o'clock, collided with a Peerless sedan driven by E. J. Forde, of Knowles avenue, who was driving south at Crocker avenue and Mission street. It was very foggy at the time of the crash. The driver was not injured, but the machine was somewhat the worse for the encounter and had to be towed to a garage.

WOMAN DIES FROM INJURIES INFLICTED BY STREET CAR

Mrs. Augusta Koch, of Hanover street, who had been in the South San Francisco hospital since July 25, when she was struck by a No. 14 Market Street Railway car, on Mission street in front of the Daly City Theatre, passed away last Wednesday from the effects of the accident. Mrs. Koch received a fractured skull and other injuries when she was struck by the car.

Entertains Crocker Study Circle

Mrs. Myron Alexander, of Hanover street, entertained the members and friends of the Crocker P. T. A. study circle at her home last Monday afternoon. The guests played the usual sixteen hand whist game, after which delicious refreshments were enjoyed. The guests inculded Mrs. Mary Welsch, Mrs. S. Tompsett, Mrs. W. Grantham, Mrs. C. Anderson, Mrs. J. Jordan, Mrs. E. Bolger, Mrs. O. Pauw and Mrs. I. Alexander.

WESTERN PACIFIC WINS FIGHT FOR PENINSULA LINE

That work on the Western Pacific's $8,000,000 Penisula line will actually be under way by the first of the year appeared likely following announcement last Friday of the recommendation of Examiner O. D. Weed of the Interstate Commerce Commission that a permit for the line had been granted.

While the examiner's recommendation is not final in the legal sense, it is regarded as absolute assurance that the Penisula permit will receive the unanimous approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Already, it is said, engineering forces of the Western Pacific are preparing to get busy as soon as the legal foundation is laid.

The next formal step is the appearance of Western Pacific and Southern Pacific attorneys before the Interstate Commerce Commission en banc at Washington to argue the merits of the the examiner's recommendation. This will probably occur in about a month. Southern Pacific attorneys who battled the Western Pacific application at the hearings here in May, will probably be present at the hearings before the commission en banc, but it is not believed that they will make any further protest to granting the permit.

Word comes from San Francisco that the Southern Pacific "was satisfied" and would not put any more obstacles in the way of the Peninsula line. With practical withdrawal of the Southern Pacific opposition, it is believed that the official decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission will be handed down probably during September. This would assure the beginning of work long before the first of next year.

Details of the Weed report indicated that his recommendations carry three conditions.

The first is that the Western Pacific shall not construct its own bridge across the bay to Niles unless it is unable to come to terms with the Southern Pacific for the use of the Southern Pacific Dumbarton bridge. This condition, it is believed, will be readily acceptable to the Western Pacific, which will be willing to avoid both the delay and the expense of building its own bay span.

The second condition is that the link between San Francisco and Redwood City shall not be operated until the Western Pacific is assured of a link across the bay to Niles. This is regarded as a safety clause seeking to prevent what Examiner Wood declined to approve in a previous report, namely construction of an unconnected link extending merely from San Francisco to Redwood City.

The third condition is that trackage rights over the new line be granted to any other bona fide railroad seeking an all rail entrance to San Francisco. The offer of this service was made valuntarily by the Western Pacific.

BUILDING PERMITS ISSUED DURING MONTH OF JULY

A. L. Stockton, 6100 Mission street, move building to new location.

VACATION PREACHER IN GRACE CHURCH

During the absence of the pastor of the Presbyterian church the pulpit is being supplied by a series of interesting speakers. Mr. Ray Gomes, of San Anselmo Theological Seminary, will occupy the pulpit Sunday, August 10, at 7:45 P. M. He is not only a winsome speaker but presents the Gospel message in song also. Mr. Gomes will sing at the service.

Strangers and visitors are especially welcome at the services. The church is located at Hanover and Evergreen.

MERCHANTS' NINE AGAIN VICTORIOUS

The Daly City Merchants chalked up their second straight hard fought victory last Sunday, defeating the Luxor Cab nine by a score of 3 to 1, on University diamond.

Gene Keagle, local chucker, held the cabmen to eight scattered hits, pitching shutout ball for seven innings. Gene allowed only one man to reach third base in this sparkling execution. He did not issue a base on balls and in two frames pitched less than half a dozen balls to retire the side.

The Merchants' fieldsrs were given a chance to display some of their ability, as Keagle struck out only four batters, and what a classy performance they turned in. Not less than six good plays were executed. Al. Toole was the brightest star of the local nine's defense, accepting ten chances without an error. Plansky, Doyle, Rettig and Evenson also made good catches.

It is beginning to appear that Manager Cavagnaro was right when he said, "If we get the brand of pitching I expect in the future, there is no reason for the local nine being defeated by and city team."

Daly City did not hit Malloch, the Luxor pitcher, very hard, obtaining only eight safeties. That was exactly three more bingles than they needed to win. Fred Strand led the attack with a double and single in three times at bat.

The local nine garnered two hits in the third inning to draw first blood. Toole led off with a single and went to third on a wild pitch. He scored on Rettig's line drive to right field after Strand and Keagle were put out.

Bunching three more safeties in the following inning, the Merchants tallied twice. Doyle, Evenson and Toole filled the bags, bringing Strand to bat. Fred singled sharply through the infield to score Doyle and Evenson. There were two outs at the time.

The Merchants enjoyed this three run lead until the eighth inning. Three cabmen hit safely in that frame to obtain Luxor's lone marker. Keagle allowed five singles, not more than one in any inning, up to that stage. On three occasions the local infielders prevented a rally with double plays.

This contest was played in one hour and forty minutes, and was not marred by erorrs or wild base running. Only one misplay was chalked up, and the same number of stolen bases. These facts give you some idea of the brand of baseball the local nine is playing lately.

Daly City will play the A. Levy & J. Zenter nine Sunday on one of the city diamonds. The opponents, managed by Al Cohen, are a highly touted aggregation with an impressive record. This contest should produce a large number of good plays, as both teams are playing the highest brand of ball.

FARM CLUB WORK

No movement having for its object the betterment of rural life is worthy of more encouragement and support than that of forming and maintaining boys' and girls' clubs. It is gratifying to observe that the movement is spreading rapidly, and that nearly a million young people on the farms of the country are enrolled in clubs.

In a recent review by the Department of Agriculture it was shown that civic bodies, fair committees, bankers and individual business men in many states are taking notice of the club movement, and are fostering it through the offering of prizes, scholarships, trips and other rewards for efficiency shown by farm boys and girls in carrying out the various projects included in the club program.

Club activities not only serve to perepare young people for their life work, if they choose to stay on the farm, but the conducting of their own eetings develops qualities of leadership and confidence in themselves. Even those who enter other pursuits are better fitted for their future careers by the discipline and training which are inseparable from club membership.

Every rural community should cooperate with home demonstration agents and other extension workers in promoting boys' and girls' clubs. It is a splendid enterprise, which will have a most beneficial effect upon farm life in the future.

THE REFUGEE

In the court room the other day, Judge White was reproving a colored man for deserting his wife and dwelt at great length on the injustice he was doing. "Wife desertion is something, Rastus, that I must deal with severely, I am afraid, and I feel very strongly on this subject."

"But, Judge, you don't know that woman. I ain't no deserter, I'se a refugee."—Log.

"Well," said the visitor to the little son of the famous motorist, "and how are you getting on at school?"

"Fine," said the little chap. "I am now learning words of five cylinders."—London Chronicle.

RANCH FIRE PROVES TRUE VALUE OF PACIFIC SERVICE

Things looked mighty dark to Mr. and Mrs. James Ceciliani, of Banta, San Joaquin county, a few mornings ago, when fire destroyed their dairy house, cow barn and several motors, pumps and other electric equipment, leaving them without lights or water. Pacific Service, however, soon brightened things up, as Ceciliani testified in a letter to the Pacific Gas and Electric Company.

"Your men," he wrote, "were on the job even before the fire was out. They strung new lines, and by 7:30 in the evening had restored our lights and pump service which was very important in that we needed water badly to extinguish the still smoldering fire. My wife and I sincerely thank you for this service, which was so promptly and cheerfully given by your men."

A new alarm clock first sounds a soft-toned bell, and later a louder one if the sleeper does not awake and turn it off.

The San Francisco man who married three grass widows appears to be a vegetarian.

REGISTRATION OF 32,306 RECORDED

The registration of voters in San Mateo county for the primary election on August 26 is more than 2,000 in excess of the registration for the general election in 1928, it was revealed in figures given out by County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese. The total registration at the close of the registration period on Saturday last was 32,306. In 1928 for the general election in November, 30,159 were enrolled to vote.

More than 3,000 men and women registered during the "last minute" period of Friday and Saturday of last week, when County Clerk Kneese kept her office open until midnight in order to accommodate the belated voters.

Burlingame had the largest registration of any of the cities in the county, with a total of 6,222. San Mateo is second with 6,128, Redwood City third with 4,144, and Daly City fourth with 2,781.

CARMEL-SAN SIMEON ROAD WORK TO BEGIN

California motorists are rejoicing over the dispatch recently received from Sacramento divulging the fact that the California Highway Commission has just announced that grading and sorfacing operations on the Carmel-San Simeon highway from Rock Creek to San Remo will begin shortly under private contract.

Within six months, it is predicted, the eight and six-tenths miles stretch between Rocky Creek and the tract immediately below Carmel Highlands will be open for travel. The new section of road will provide comfortable travel along one of the choice spots of Pacific coastline, and will eliminate the haazrdous curves and grades of the present county highway over that stretch.

ATTORNEY W. H. CLAY

The campaign of Attorney W. H. Clay for Justice of the Peace of the First Township is receiving such general and favorable endorsement that old time politicians and those well informed are predicting a landslide for him at Daly City, with a heavy vote at South San Francisco and Burlingame at the coming primary election.

His learning and experience in the law qualifies him above all other candidates for the office, and he has a host of friends and supporters who are working diligently and earnestly for his election.—Adv.

COUNTY BAR ENDORSES ELIZABETH M. KNEESE

A genuine tribute to the efficiency and courtesy of the office of the county clerk under the administration of Elizabeth M. Kneese is offered in the endorsement given the candidacy of Mrs. Kneese by the members of the San Mateo County Bar Association.

As custodian of important records of county affairs Mrs. Kneese is called upon by the attorneys of all parts of the state for every conceivable sort of information, covering great periods of time and in the great detail so often essential in legal procedure. Frequently this information is required in great haste and it is a constant source of amazement to newcomers to the office when they are served with speed and accuracy and an unfailing courtesy which has become traditional with those familiar with it. So general has this reputation become that Mrs. Kneese has become known as the best county clerk in the state.

Among attorneys of tthe county, especially, this service is appreciated, so much so that upon the announcement of Mrs. Kneese's candidacy in the present elections the following members of the San Mateo County Bar issued this endorsement:

To the Electors of San Mateo County:

Because of the accuracy and care with which the records of the office of County Clerk of San Mateo County are at all times kept, the prompt attention to all requests made upon that office for service, the unfailing courtesy extended at all times by Elizabeth M. Kneese and her deputies to all who have business to transact at her office, and her exceptional qualifications by education and experience for the duties of the office now held by her, we, the undersigned, members of the bar residing in San Mateo county, earnestly urge the re-election of Elizabeth M. Kneese to the office which she has hitherto filled so efficiently.

NEWSPAPER MEN WILL ATTEND STATE FAIR

Newspaper men of California, other Western states and the Central and South American countries will gather at the California State Fair in Sacramento, August 30th, the opening day of the big exposition. They will be the guests of the State Agricultural Society and Governor Young. The day has been designated "Press Day" in their honor.

The program includes a luncheon at which the governor, Lyman M. King, director of the state department of finance, and R. T. Condee, president of the State Fair, will be speakers.

A section of the grand stand will be set aside for the newspaper men during the afternoon racing and entertainment program, and in the evening they will be guests at the State Fair horse show.

Newspaper men from the Pan-American countries covering the Reciprocal Trade Conference which will be held in Sacramento during the fair, will be in attendance. Invitations have also been extended to publishers in all Western states.

POPULAR DALY CITY BOY WINS SAN FRANCISCO GIRL

One of the loveliest midsummer weddings was that at which Miss Eva Menconi became the bride of Mr. Reynold Viotti, on Sunday, August 3. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Menconi, residing on Steiner street, San Francisco. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Viotti, of Templeton avenue, Daly City.

The wedding was held at Sts. Peter and Paul church. The Rev. Father Trincieri officiated.

The matron of honor was Miss Marguerite Rubiolo; the three bridesmaids attending were Misses Mabel Vireno, Elia Barsi and Eleitta Williams. Little Miss Dolores Burns was the flower girl.

The bride looked very lovely in a simple gown of egg-shell satin of Princess lines with long tight sleeves. The veil of tulle was held by a cap edged in orange blossoms. The bride carried a bouquet of gardenias, white bouvardias and lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor wore a dainty dress of pink maline and pink taffeta and a large drooping hat. Her bouquet was of pink sweet peas and pink bouvardias. The bridesmaids were charming in dainty pastel print d' esprit dresses. They carried a spray of talisman roses and yellow pansies, with streamers of maline.

Mr. Elmo Viotti was his brother's best man, and Mr. Joe Menconi, brother of the bride, Mr. Remo Valentino, and Mr. Darrell De Martini were ushers.

Following the wedding ceremony a dinner for the members of the bridal party and relatives was held at a popular restaurant in San Francisco.

Immediately after the wedding dinner a reception was held at the Druids Hall on Page street, San Francisco.

The young couple are spending their honeymoon at Yosemite. On their return they will reside in their new home in Daly City.

REAL PROGRESS

The old saying that "You can't keep a good man down" might be paraphrased into "You can't keep a good industry down."

A generation or two ago, when electricity first came into common use, the seers of the time forecast the end of the gas industry, as gas, up to that time, had been used principally for lighting.

Today gas has 21,000 or more industrial uses, is an outstanding cooking fuel, is coming into increasing favor for heating and refrigeration, and is employed in one way or another in most modern homes. That is real progress.

1¢ a meal — to cook with electricity

And the electric range costs no more than any good range

Electric cooking has an aristocratic "atmosphere."

However, fine "atmosphere" should not mislead any one from true dollar-and-cents facts. Here they are:

You can cook a complete meal for four people with 4c worth of electricity. In addition, the price of an electric range itself is no more than any good range.

And how the electric range improves cooking! — and gives you more time for out-of-the-kitchen activities. For electric cooking can be entirely automatic. After a meal is placed in the oven, you never have to watch it — or baste the meat. Moreover, the electric range is the "keynote" for a beautiful, clean kitchen.

Today's electric range has Improved Cooking Elements, 29 to 50% speedier. Fully enameled Rust-Proof Oven. Smokeless Broiler Pan. Smooth Porcelain Enamel which wipes clean easily. Cooker Pot. Automatic Oven Temperature Control, and a Special Time Clock for automatically turning the oven current on and off while you're away.

Come into our office or a dealer's store and see the fine new electric ranges. And remember, modern electric cooking IS economical.

UNCLE SAM'S LOTTERIES

Postal regulations are very strict with respect to the mailing of any matter pertaining to a lottery of any kind. To even publish the winning number in a drawing for a prize, however little in value, in a newspaper is an offence. But it was not always so.

An American national lottery was established by the Continental Congress of 1776, and between that date and 1820 at least 70 acts were passed by Congress authorizing lotteries in aid of public projects, such as schools, roads and other improvements.

During the presidency of Washington, Harvard College supported itself in part by a grand lottery, with capital prizes as high as $20,000.

Most European governments have at some time or another employed national lotteries as a means of raising funds for the public treasuries, and municipal lotteries have been common. Cuba has conducted a national lottery since the formation of the republic.

France financed the war of the Spanish Succession by a lottery which was not suppressed until 1836. England authoried lotteries for harbor improvements and for the financing of the Virginia Company, which founded the earlier settlements in America, and raised government funds by that means until 1824.

Religious and charitable organiations were in some countries permitted to operate lotteries long after the governments had abolished them as national institutions.

But during the last hundred years the trend of sentiment has been against lotteries, particularly in the United States, where drastic legislation for their suppression has been enacted.

Still the gambling instinct is perhaps as strong as ever and finds opportunities for expression in many ways, ranging from the outright method of the gaming table to lawful speculation in markets and stocks, regarding the morals of which there is much difference of opinion, even among the better elements of society.

FALSE IDEAS STICK

After an erroneous statement has been repeated often enough it is next to impossible to eradicate it from the popular mind.

For many years the question was asked why the addition of a fish to a pail of water would not add to the weight of the bucket and its contents. Several ingenious explanations were offered, but the real reason could not be agreed upon. Finally some inquisitive skeptic weighed a bucket of water and after adding a five-pound fish weighed it again. It weighed just five pounds more than it did before adding the fish. The question, therefore, was shown to be based upon a false assumption.

A similar situation is pointed out by the Christian Science Monitor in answer to the question of why the younger generation is so much inclined to crime. Thirteen cities reporting to the United States Children's Bufeau showed that in nine of them juvenile delinquency decreased, while an increase was noted in only four.

Likewise, it is popularly supposed that crime in Chicago is more prevalent than ever before. Yet actual statistics show that crime since 1915 in that city has not increased in proportion to the incerase in population.

So, as Josh Billings once said, "it's just as well not to know so much, as to know so blamed much that ain't so."

Now we have a cLague for the Abolition of Capital Punishment, of which most jurymen appear to be charter members.

LINCOLN'S ELEPHANTS

Few persons, perhaps, know that Abraham Lincoln at one time virtually had a herd of twelve elephants on his hands. He did not exactly have them in his possession, but they were offered to him, and it took all the tact for which he was famous to gracefully decline them.

The letter in which he turned down the proffered gift has only recently come to light, according to a writer in the Pathfinder, who relates that the elephants were presented to President Lincoln for the United States government by the King of Siam, as a token of friendship. Lincoln's letter to the king was written on February 3, 1862, and contained this paragraph:

"This government would not hesitate to avail itself of so generous an offer if the object were one which could be made practically useful in the present condition of the United States. Our political jurisdiction, however, does not reach a latitude so low as to favor the multiplication of the elephants."

Lincoln's reference to his lack of jurisdiction over warm latitudes is given point by the fact that the South was not then under Federal control, and illustrates the subtle humor which often characterized his uterances.

EARLY BATH TUBS

If certain data we have run across lately are authentic, the joke about the Saturday night bath is not so old as we had imagined. It is recorded that the first bath tub put in commission in the United States was christened on Christmas day, 1842.

Looking up the day of the week in a perpetual calendar, we find that this was Sunday, but it is possible that the first bath was really taken on Christmas eve, thus establishing the Saturday night tradition.

Upon its introduction the bath tub was looked upon with much suspicion, as it is by small boys until this day. In Boston an ordinance was passed prohibiting baths except upon the advice of a physician. About 1844 the Philadelphia city council came within two votes of passing an ordinance prohibiting baths altogether between November 1 and March 15.

Bath tubs were heavily taxed in those early days, even as the modern automobile. Shortly after they were introduced in Virginia a state tax of $36 was imposed on each tub installed.

Still, Americans of those times were more given to bathing than the old Russians. We have read somewhere that Peter the Great bathed only once a year. But there were extenuating circumstances. Russia is a very cold country.

RUBBER FARM PESTS

In case we ever have occasion to complain that a neighbor's chickens have devastated a corner of our garden, or that his pig has rooted therein, we may reflect upon the woes of the rubber farmer and take consolation.

The manager of a 5,000 acre plantation in Sumatra recently told of some of the difficulties of rubber farming. His plantation is adjacent to a natural jungle, where all sorts of wild beasts have their habitat when they are not playing havoc with the rubber trees.

Elephants are the practical jokers of the animal kingdom according to this manager, and their favorite sport is pulling up young rubber trees with their trunks and tossing them at one another. The plantation is also quite frequently visited by tigers, rhinoceri, tropical deer, wild pigs and other inhabitants of the jungle, which likewise take their sport in messing up the place. Still, the damage done does not prevent the raising and export of vast quantities of rubber.

The increased demand due to the growth of the automobile industry and the new uses which have been found for this product tend to assure the prosperity of the rubber farmer, in spite of the playfulness of the elephants and other jungle neighbors.

HEALTH AND SAFETY

American industry today quite generally realizes that health and safety are first cousins, if not quite "brothers under the skin." It has gone about the solution of this problem in a commonsense manner. A great many of our industrial and mercantile groups co-operate with their employes to secure periodic physical examinations. Some maintain their own industrial health departments where the worker can freely discuss the results of his health examination with proper medical supervisors. The idea is to keep the men out of the hospitals—to check and correct the sources of illness. Prevention is the all-important thing, and it is believed that prevention is sound economic investment. It helps the company and also the man. To both, the good health of the employe is a major consideration. His health is the nation's wealth, its greatest asset.—Irving Fisher Professor of Economics Yale University.

TELEPHONE FACTS

At the time of the last official telephone census we had 59 per cent of the world's 32,712,284 instruments.

We have 16.3 telephones for each 100 persons of our population. And Canada, with 13.7 per hundred, is the only other country even approximating this record. Germany, second to the United States in total number, has but 4.6 instruments per hundred.

The fifty-one American cities with populations in excess of 200,000 have an average of 22.8 telephones per hundred, while only two foreign cities have an equally high average. New York City has nearly as many telephones as Great Britain. San Francisco leads the world in telephone density, with an instrument for every three persons.

In the space of a single lifetime the telephone has encircled the world, and bound cities, states, nations and continents together through the medium of the spoken word. No other industry has done more for world unity of thought.

THE STORY

Renewing a childhood attachment, Ernestine Briceland, of a wealthy family, is attracted by Will Todd, newspaper artist. Her sister, Lillian, urges her to break off the affair, but Ernestine refuses. A runaway marriage follows. Loring Hamilton wins Lillian's consent to become his wife. Will and Ernestine begin their married life in humble surroundings. John Poole, Will's best friend, gives a birthday party for Ernestine at Ruby Pastano's resort.

"But you have lived in the country?"

"Oh, yes, always, in the summer. My Grandmother Langley had a home in Indiana where my father's quarries are. Why do you ask?"

"Never mind me. Tell me of yourself. This house in the country, and your home on Sheridan road is a long way from here."

Ernestine understood his idea, but she refused to be drawn into such a complicated conversation.

"It is only a few miles," she replied, and he gave an impatient exclamation.

"It is a thousand miles and a hundred years at least," he said. "Tell me about your mother's house."

Ernestine thought about it.

"Do you know anything about American period furniture, Mr. Pastano? There is a Duncan Phyfe table, and pierced brass fire-fender, in the living room; four-poster beds upstairs, with hooked rugs and woven counterpanes—all of the things have come into the family honestly, through natural possession, and not from auction rooms. But, of course, you know."

She smiled at him. Her long hands lay together in the immaculate perfection of her yellow chiffon lap. Her voice was low, only for his ears, and though she thought him very strange, she gave him her gravest, youngest courtesy.

"I know nothing about America, at all, it seems."

"It's just the house—I'll take you to see it some day, if you like, although mamma doesn't like people to consider it a museum, as some experts do. Of course, I don't live there since my marriage. We live in a rooming house on Erie stret, and it just shows that furniture and things do not mean so much, for I am happier now than I was."

"You have lef' this house of your mother, with pierced brass from your own ancestors, to live in Erie street?"

She nodded and smiled again, and her eyes pleaded for his understanding.

He shook his head sadly. He heaved a vast sigh.

"No, I do not understand America. Continually I am full of new astonishment. Women are somewhat the same the world around—but American men are outside my comprehension."

"You have been successful here," she reminded him, but he brushed her comment aside, pursuing his own thought aloud.

"But You Have Lived in the Country?"

"No, I do not understand. If my son is penniless; if he is an artist starving in a garret, and the great, the incredible good fortune come to him that he shall marry a girl of noble birth who has a quiet voice, and gentle still hands, and a brow where breeding shows its lovely smile—If my son have the grace and the smile of fortune to marry such a girl, and he bring her to a place like this—" He looked about him with scorn. "If he bring his wife to this brothel—this sink—I take a knife in my own hand and stab him through the heart. You must go away from here instantly—now! There is activity in this room that pollutes the very air. You will strangle in it—"

Ernestine's heart stopped beating in her astonishment. She felt that she had been unbearably affronted, and she rose and stood pale with anger. Mr. Pastano rose and stood before her, and met with approval the blaze of her eyes. A waiter appeared instantly with her coat, and he took it and wrapped it about her with immense dignity.

"So, go, princess!" he exclaimed, and bowed a little, and looked at her again, his own eyes alight. "You have only my good wishes. It is unfortunate I must confess the title to a place unfit for you, but this place was not made for you. The unfit, the broken, the abnormal must have their haunts, and they are not for others. Some day, perhaps, it will be my fortune that we shall be friends."

Every one was staring at them. Will had risen and stood beside her, smiling uncertainly, not knowing at all what was going forward.

"I want to go home," Ernestine said to him icily.

"Tommy will take you," Will answered easily, "I have to take Mr. Poole to his flat."

Ernestine felt herself beginning to tremble with the indignities heaped upon her. She had been so in love, so exposed, that it all hurt her incredibly. She looked about her uncertainly, then laughed and answered Will with composure.

"I don't believe I'll have to depend on Tommy. Here are Lillian and Loring. They'll take me home."

Will swung about in astonishment, and there, indeed, coming through the room uneasily, were Lillian and her lover. Ernestine stood, smiling malignantly, as they came forward.

"Ernestine," exclaimed Lillian, when she was near enough, "I wanted to see you. We went to Mrs. Bennett's, but the maid said you were here, so we followed you. Can you come with us?"

"I was just going," answered Ernestine. "But wait and meet our friends. This is my sister, Miss Briceland, Mrs. Wiston, and Mr. Poole, Lillian, and Monsieur Mostane, and Mr. Wiston of the Sun, and Mr. Underwood, and Mr. Heyward—and this is Mr. Pastano, who owns this charming place. And this is Mr. Hamilton, Mrs. Wiston—"

The men had risen and were fumbling over the acknowledgements of the introductions. Ernestine seemed the most composed person present, and no one could have guessed that her knees were trembling.

"We wanted to get on, if you and Will can come with us," said Loring, while Mr. Pastano stood and regarded the newcomers evenly.

"I'll come with you, but Will has an engagement before he returns home. Goodby, Mr. Poole. Thank you for the evening."

She gave her hand to her host, and he put his own hand on her shoulder to steady himself. Loring winced and scowled at this contact, but Ernestine was now in complete command of herself and smiled steadily. Mr. Poole's heavy face, his confusion, did not dismay her. She bade him an affectionate good night, then turned to the others.

"Good night, all of you. I'm sorry to run away, from my own party, but somebody must start. If you will excuse me— Good night, Will. I'll see you later."

She gave Will a luminous look. He did not answer but stared at her silently, and she turned, sweeping her wrap about her, carrying herself like a queen of the realm, and went off, Loring's black bulk between the sisters, his face dark with forebodings.

Down the wooden stairs they passed in complete silence. A new sedan stood at the curb, and Loring in majestic silence opened the car door for the girls who got in the back seat. He closed the door and got in the driver's seat and started the engine. Lillian and Ernestine sat close together in the warmth and comfort of the heated upholstered, glass-enclosed interior. Ernestine felt for the first time a poignant homesickness for comfort and convenience.

"Why didn't Will come with us?" asked Loring from the front seat.

Ernestine decided to be frank.

"You could see that Mr. Poole had been drinking too much, couldn't you? Well, Will felt that he ought to take him home and see that he got there safely. He often does that. They're good friends, you know. And you mustn't think badly of Mr. Poole. He's old, and, really, he is a wonderful man."

"But how about you? How would you have got home? Our coming along was an accident."

"Tommy Tucker would have taken me," said Ernestine calmly. "Or the Wistons, or Monsieur Mostane. I'd have gone home all right."

There was a silence of disapproval and adjustment. The car rolled smoothly along the quiet streets.

"Then everything's all right?" asked Lillian diffidently.

"Of course, darling."

"I'm so glad. Will you come and have lunch with mamma and me tomorrow and let me tell you all our plans?"

"I'll see," said Ernestine. "Now, I'll have to go home. I'm terribly tired."

"Of course you are. It's late. I'm tired, too. But, Ernestine, I'm so happy that I wonder if I can be any happier." Her voice was bright and clear—quick and competent. Ernestine remembered the tears and passion of her own engagement.

"You will be happy always. You will," she said with intensity.

They left her at the stone steps and watched until she opened the door with her latchkey and disappeared into the dark prison-like house. Then Loring turned the car about and, with Lillian at his side, started back north. Lillian cuddled against him.

"Oh, Lorrie," she said sorrowfully, "she isn't happy. You know she isn't. It wouldn't be so bad for her to be poor, if only he were good to her. But you can see that he neglects her. If he cannot provide for her decently he could at least be a gentleman to her. But after all she has done for him, he mistreats her."

"Don't be disturbed about it, darling," said Loring in a low voice. "There's nothing we can do now. Only be good to her and wait for her to waken."

In Mrs. Bennett's boarding house Ernestine climbed the stairs slowly, feeling herself weak with rage.

CHAPTER V

The First Quarrel

Ernestine's anger and resentment grew like a bonfire. The small front room was cold, but she was unaware of its temperature or of the frost gathering thick on the window. Everything was fuel to the flame which burned in her. The longer Will delayed the more her anger grew. His cavalier treatment of her. Tommy could take her home! Mr. Poole needed him. More than anything else, more, she told herself, than the humiliation of Mr. Pastano's scorn was this fact, that Mr. Poole mattered more than she did.

She gave herself up to anger as she had given herself to love—with abandon. Will had neglected her. He had humiliated her. She knew that she would not have cared for any of it so much if she had not been forced to see it through the horrified eyes of her sister and Loring. They were pitying her now. She could imagine Lillian's comments, Loring's sympathy. That was the crux of the whole matter. And Mr. Poole, the vile old drunkard! Was this the sort of friendship her marriage was to bring her? She had given up everything for Will—everything! Was he to sacrifice nothing for her? Could he not abandon this adoration of an obscene old man who happened to be a cartoonist? It was not necessary for these gifted people to foregather in such a place. She burned and trembled as she recalled Pastano's contempt. That strangers should need to instruct her as to her proper place—

So absorbing were her thoughts, so wrapped was she in the resounding cadences of her own inner tumult, that she did not hear the outer door nor Will's soft step on the stairs, when at last he came.

"Up yet?" he asked in a husky whisper. "You should have been in bed two hours ago. It's cold as the devil outside. But what's the matter, kitten? Aren't you well?"

"Don't speak to me!" said Ernestine, and the fact that, like himself, she had to lower her voice in consideration for people sleeping on either side only added to her rage.

"But Ernestine!"

"Don't speak to me!" she cried again, and this time her voice was clear. "I never want to go anywhere with you again."

"Be silent," he commanded in a voice low but stern, and his eyes leaped back at her with an anger equal to her own. "Have you lost your wits? Shouting in this place in the middle of the night?"

Ernestine stood, her mouth open a little in amazement at his tone. Hot words trembled upon her tongue.

"Undress and get in bed," said Will. "What do you mean, sitting here, without more clothes on, in this icy room? Do you wish to harm yourself?"

She laughed. "You are concerned about my welfare, aren't you?" she taunted him, and for answer he seized her shoulders and gave her a quick little shake.

"Ernestine," he demanded, "will you do as I say?"

She stood trembling, fighting down the stupid well of tears, reaching out after her departing anger.

"Will,"—her voice was as low, as vital as his own—"I'm in such a rage that I have got to talk to you. You can't treat me this way. You can't leave me to the courtesy of strangers. You can't take me to such places—where there's drunkenness and immorality. You have got to be a better husband to me than that. I have given up everything for you—everything—"

"When you are in bed, I'll talk to you," he answered, as he threw off his coat and went to the wardrobe and brought her her warm dressing gown, nightgown and fur-lined moccasins. He undid the fastening of her dress and before she could arm herself against him, he lifted it off over her head. The satin slip, the silken underthings—her body was like cold marble. In a moment, it seemed, she was in nightgown and dressing gown, in bed, and he was drawing off her gossamer hose and chafing her feet in his own cold hands until the mottled skin showed red with blood. Then he tucked her under the covers and brought a chair and sat down beside her, not touching her. Ernestine laughed again.

"If you really cared," she said, her eyes dark with anger and pain, "whether I were warmly in bed you might have come with me to see."

He was silent. He was very pale. Small beads of perspiration stood upon his forehead in the cold room.

"I am not likely to be ill," she said scornfully. "Don't be afraid of that."

Still he did not speak, but looked at her as though he were trying to arrange some momentous decision in his mind. He took a cigarette from his pocket with hands trembling so that when he lighted it he burned himself, and flung the match away with an angry exclamation.

"Ernestine," he said, turning to her, "there is one thing that I will never take from you. You are hysterical now, but no matter how angry, how sick or upset you are, there is one thing that you must never say to me. Never again. I won't take it from you."

He drew the smoke into his lungs with an effort at self-control, while she stared up at the blur of him, her dark eyes swimming with tears.

"I didn't know that you gave up anything for me," he said. "I thought this marriage was on both sides the satisfying of a strong need. I never asked you to make a sacrifice for me. At least, that is not the way I thought of it, and I don't think you did either. But if you made one, I will never ask you to continue it. Any time you want what you left you have only to put on your hat and go back and get it. This must be understood between us. You are under no compulsion to stay with me. If you gave up other things, it was because this was something you wanted more. Either our marriage was a gain for both of us, or it was a mistake."

"Why don't you go ahead and remind me that I proposed to you?" she said, too helpless in her own emotions to be sensible.

"Did you?" he asked coldly. "I thought the matter was spontaneous. I thought it was inevitable. Don't cheapen yourself with such a thought.

"I Didn't Leave You Unprotected. In Reality You Left Me."

But however it happened, it was not a sacrifice. I will not be sacrificed for. I don't want anybody to give up anything for me. Understand?"

There was a moment of silence, and he went on swiftly:

"It may be that before we are through with this business of marriage it will be really hard for us. I don't know that I'll ever be what your family considers essential in a husband—a good provider. I may never make more than a small living for us. Sometimes, like now, I feel such power in me that I could go out and take life by the throat. I feel at times that there are big things in me, Ernestine. But perhaps all human beings feel that way. There are other moments when I'm not even sure that I can hold the job I have. What then? Maybe there is worse ahead of us, instead of better. What of that? Do we love each other, or don't we? Are we married, or are we simply having a lovely time and will go home when the party is over? You can do as you like. I will not interfere with your actions, but neither will I come home and account for my own. If Mr. Poole is drunk and it seems necessary to me to go home with him, you must allow me the exercise of my own judgment. I didn't leave you unprotected. In reality, you left me."

"It wasn't only that." She was actually defending herself. "It was everything. Lillian and Loring coming in on us, and Mr. Pastano—"

Half weeping, still partly in the hold of anger, she told him all that Mr. Pastano had said to her. He listened attentively, but made nothing of it.

"What do you care," he exclaimed, "what that bully says? It's only a compliment. It's only a denial of his whole code of morals. The fact that you could sit in his dirty place and still be so clean that even he could see it, gives the lie to all he says."

"I don't understand anything," wailed Ernestine. "Only I was so hurt— I had to go off alone with them. You might have come with me. I was so happy, so thrilled, and then everything was spoiled without any warning. I can't adjust myself to things like you do—I don't understand. Of course I care what Mr. Pastano thinks. I don't want him to think you would take me out to associate with p-prostitutes!"

He sat on the edge of the bed now and held her hand and smoked another cigarette and thought about this. But they had come back into a calmer place. He began to reason with her in his steady voice, looking down at her with his kindled, intelligent eyes.

"You see, Ernestine, he's got the old line on things, and we, I believe, want the new. Pastano's morality and virtue are only for women. I've been there often, and he's made me very welcome. How unreal it is. Virtue a woman's prerogative, and a stone wall about her to insure it. A harem! You don't believe in walled gardens for wives, do you, Ernestine? After all, no man can protect his wife's virtue for her, if she is determined to throw it away."

"You think then that a husband has no responsibilities at all?"

Norway Wedding Feast One to Be Remembered

A Norwegian housewife will spend months in the active preparation of a daughter's marriage feast. Friends, neighbors, acquaintances, kinsmen and kinswomen come from far and wide. All must be welcomed. All must be fed and "refreshed," and without limit. There must be cheese, sweet soups, puddings, fish and game in enormous quantities. To have any one of the most numerous items of drink or food give out or run short would be a disgrace which nothing could wipe out. There must, above all, be brandy in mad abundance. As a rule, several couples are married at the same time. This diminishes a waste of time, and concentrates to one occasion what would otherwise be spread over several.

The gowns which the Norwegian bride wears are often of great value. They are frequently the property of the church, and are hired for a nominal sum. Other parts of the costume are often the church's, too, and the bride who cannot afford to purchase an elaborate bridal outfit can always hire one.

That Frenchman De Tour

Some eastern tourists stopped at Somerset, Wis., for gas and oil. The man at the filling station was of Scandinavian persuasion. The tourists were discussing the roads, and the Swede horned into the conversation with the following:

"Det Svede Yefferson haes gat som fine roads, en det English man Lincoln haes gat some fine roads tu, en Roosevelt his ant so bad, but det Frenchmen De Tour haes gat da vorst roads ay aver saw."—Badger Highways.

Turning Back Time's Pages

Tracks which animals left in Alabama 250,000,000 years ago, a petrified crocodile which succumbed in New Mexico 60,000,000 years ago, dinosaur bones at least 80,000,000 years old, the petrified skeleton of a man who settled in Florida perhaps as much as 20,000 years ago and the frozen bones of animals which roamed Alaska at about the same period, were among the important scientific discoveries announced by the American Museum of Natural History recently as a result of the activities of the organization.

Canton Water Clock

The water float or clepsydra in Canton dates back some 500 years and has been destroyed and rebuilt many times. It is composed of three copper vessels placed one above the other on steplike platforms. In the bottom vessel is a float with an indicator scale passing through it, which, as the water fills the lower vessel, rises and shows the time.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

THE NEW FRIEND

"I didn't feel myself falling at any time," David said thoughtfully to the little creature who had just joined him.

And Waved His Arms.

"Of course you didn't!" This new friend certainly seemed very wise and understanding of everything.

"It's a fall you'd scarcely notice anyway and besides you were busy seeing the Living Map spread itself out for you.

"You would never get anywhere on this journey," he went on, "if everything were kept its regular size for you to see. How big is the town where you live?"

"I don't quite know," said David, "but it is pretty large. It is almost a city."

"And you'd be pretty tired out even at the end of a week, for example, if you took every walk and climbed every hill and went over every single part of it and the surrounding country."

"Oh, it spreads out ever so far," David said.

"Of course! Well, just think of how much room it takes up and then you will see that the real world is bigger than any map there ever was and much bigger of course than a Living Map. But a Living Map is made up of your own maps which have come to life and which have grown very, very much larger than the maps you have ever seen."

"It's truly a magic map," David said again.

"A great, big enormous Living Map," the little chap repeated very decidedly. Certainly he would call it nothing else. He stood up and waved his arms, as though he were trying to take in the whole world.

"You see," he explained, "at first we gave you an idea of how it all looked—all this side of the world I mean—and then we let it spread itself out enough for you to adventure about and get an idea of what was what. It's the size now it is going to be for you."

David thought this was a pretty big honor—to have this done for him.

"Sometimes you will want to see one part more than another but a great deal you won't have time to see."

"Am I to see the world?"

"If that is your wish, you are."

"I very much wish to see it," David cried excitedly. How wonderful to think that you could see the earth if you simply said you wished to do so.

"Who Are You?"

But though David would call it the Living Map as that was what these Map people called it, he would always think of it as a magic map, for certainly it was magic!

And it almost seemed to belong to him. It could really be called his map—David's magic map—how very fine that sounded!

Yet he must remember he was only to speak of it as the Living Map. His companion was speaking to him.

"But you will get mighty confused if you don't notice me."

David looked at him wonderingly.

"Who are you?" he asked. "I don't know your name."

"I'm Compass," was the answer.

RIDDLE BOX

1. Why is an old man like a window?
2. What is the difference between a beached vessel and a wrecked airplane?
3. What is it that occurs once in a minute, twice in a moment, and not once in a thousand years?
4. Why is the letter S like thunder?
5. What animals are in the clouds?

Answers to Riddles.

1. Because he is full of pains. 2. One grounds on the land, the other lands on the ground. 3. The letter M. 4. Because it makes our cream sour cream. 5. Rain, dear (reindeer).

Memorial to Sheep Dog

A Scottish shepherd had a very clever collie dog, who could fetch the sheep from the hills after they had been wandering for some days.

When the collie arrived with the missing flock, his master looked the sheep over and counted them. If any were lacking, the man would look at the dog and say, "There's three wanting," and the dog would understand, and go off again and search till the missing sheep were found.

At last this dog died, and the shepherd put these words on a small tablet over his grave: "There's one wanting."

"UNDER THE SPREADING CHESTNUT TREE—"

"Under the spreading chestnut tree, the village smithy stands—"

And not so many years ago, the "Village Smithy" stood as the chief, and almost sole, local industry. The activities of this romantic figure have been expanded, until today we have a complex, many-sided industrial world—specialized and diversified; offering greater employment, housed in modern quarters and operating modern machinery.

But the picture of the "Village Smithy" still remains the symbol of local industry.

Industry is essential to our community growth and development. It furnishes employment, it brings additional money, it adds greatly to taxable property, it attracts additional attention to us as a community. Industry is a powerful, constructive influence.

Our town needs the right kind of Industry and Industry needs us as the right kind of town.

It should be the desire of everyone to promote the growth of industry in this community. Not only should we strive to secure both large and small industries for our town, but we should make our present industries feel we welcome them. The smallest industry is of importance for, like the larger industrial unit, it too, employs labor, diversifies our industrial activity and possesses the possibility of growth.

But to attract and hold industry we must be deserving!

Sixty per cent of all industry can go where it pleases! It selects the community in which it desires to locate. The present era is showing a great migration of industry, with the trend toward the smaller industrial centers.

What, then, should we do to attract and hold more industries?

To attract industry we must possess its fundamental requirements. First, as a community, we must prove attractive to Industry by being a good place in which to live—by improving our rating as to general living conditions.

Industry seeks the towns where present living conditions result in better production. The possibility of home ownership is important because it makes for permanent employees. Modern school facilities for the children and wholesome recreation and amusement, largely publicly provided, are attractive to industry. And also of utmost importance is the care exercised in Public Health—a guarantee of health to all right-living employees.

Improved transportation and wide-spread electric power have fitted many places for industrial growth. Fortunate is the town that can offer industry lower production costs, improved shipping facilities, nearness to markets and raw materials, low land costs and reduced taxes.

This Community must share in the industrial expansion. Let us "put our house in order" so that we may create a greater industrial development. Let us strive to enjoy the fruits of increased employment, increased population and increased prosperity.

Commercial organizations alone should not be asked to do all of the work of attracting industry to our city. Each person should do his share to make our town attractive to industry—should broadcast the many points of advantage of

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHPLACE IS NOW BEING RESTORED

A dispatch from Washington, D. C., announces that the contract has been let for the moving of the monument which now stands on the site of Washington's old homestead at Wakefield, Virginia. This monument, of Barre, Vermont, granite, is 51 feet tall, and was erected by the United States government in 1896, to indicate the birth site. It is being moved to a site nearby that a replica of the house in which Washington was born may be built on the original location.

Already workmen are busy at Wakefield making bricks by hand from the native clay, to be used in the restoration of the house. As soon as the monument is removed the work of building a replica of the old house will be undertaken, as well as the restoration of the grounds. This work is being done in co-operation with the Wakefield National Memorial Association and is planned for completion before the celebration of the bi-centennial of the birth of Washintgon in 1932.

Many plans are being made that the celebration of the bi-centennial will be a nation-wide event. Organizations and communities are asked to co-operate to assure the success of the undertaking.

Digging into the past is not new. An expedition now excavating at Ur, in Mesopotamia, has unearthed clay tablets recording investigations of Chaldean archaeologists, who 700 years before the Christian era were likewise digging up buried debris of former civiliaztions. Discoveries of present day archaeologists are astounding, but few people know or care about the wonderful material being brought to light.

Branding his own lively weekly as "the most low-down paper on earth," the editor of the Coachella Valley (Cal.) Submarine cleverly attracts attention to the fact that it is published in a town located below the level of the sea. The "low-downess" of the publication is entirely topographical.

If any husband should feel secure in the belief that his spouse would not run away, a Mr. DeFuller, of New York, whose wife had been born without legs, should have had that comfort. Yet it is reported that Mrs. DeFuller, a sideshow freak, did skip out with all her costumes $2,000 worth of jewelry and $100 in cash, which constituted all the DeFuller hoard.

The average span of life in America is now fifteen years longer than it was in 1870, being now about 55 years. In the seventh century an average lifetime was only about 25 years, due to the tremendous infant mortality, while it was only 35 years a century ago. If the appalling toll of death from accidents and crime could be reduced, several more years might be added to the average lifetime in this generation.

EAGLES CONCLAVE BEGINS TUESDAY

The high mark in attendance records among 1930 conventions on the Pacific Coast is due to be established at the thirty-second annual international Grand Aerie conclave of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, to be held in San Francisco, August 11 to 16. Local civic and fraternal leaders look for an attendance of 15,000 visitors, including delegates, bands, drum corps, marching clubs, drill teams, ladies' auxiliaries and uniformed groups from all parts of the United States and Canada.

The vanguard of the convention visitors reached San Francisco last Wednesday morning, with the arrival of the Grand Aerie officers and national headquarters' staff by special train. Grand Worthy President Charles J. Chenu, of Sacramento, Grand Worthy Vice-president Robert E. Proctor, of Elkhart, Indiana, Past Grand Worthy President Col. Conrad H. Mann, of Kansas City, and Past Worthy Grand President Frank E. Hering, of South Bend, Indiana, headed the party.

The thirty-second annual international Grand Aerie convention will be formally opened on Tuesday evening, August 11, with brilliant civic and literary exercises in the Civic Auditorium. Archbishop Edward J. Hanna will pronounce the invocation, and selections by the Municipal orchestra will precede the short addresses of greetings by Mayor James Rolph, Jr., Governor C. C. Young, Chairman Albert S. Samuels of the general committee, and Chairman F. N. Belgrano, Jr., of the citizens' committee. Former Mayor P. H. McCarthy of San Francisco will preside as chairman of the evening and Grand Worthy President Charles J. Chenu will respond for the Grand Aerie. The principal address of the evening will be delivered by Past Grand Worthy President Frank E. Hering national editor of the Eagles' magazine, and national chairman of the order's old-age pension commission. Eminent concert artists will offer musical and vocal selections, and Rabbi Reichart will conclude the exercises with benediction.

The business sessions of the Grand Aerie will be held August 11 to 16, in the main hall of the Civic Auditorium. The meetings of the California State Aerie are to take place in Polk Hall; and the assemblies of the ladies' auxiliaries will be staged in the Eagles' auditorium and Red Men's Hall.

An elaborate entertainment and hospitality program has been arranged for the convention visitors, including sightseeing trips, bay excursions, dances, parties, high jinks, receptions and other functions. The Knights of Columbus and Moose will play hosts at open house and entertainment proprams Tuesday night, August 12. A California dinner-dance is scheduled for Wednesday evening, August 13, and the Grand Aerie convention ball will take place Thursday evening, August 14, in the Civic Auditorium. Numerous other events are on the reception program for the week of August 11 to 16.

ATTORNEY PRAISES FAITHFUL OFFICIAL

Speaking this week before the San Mateo county board of supervisors in Redwood City, District Attorney Franklin Swart urged the members of the board to look into the future and prepare for the early zoning of San Mateo county. The District Attorney said that soon this county, because of its rapid growth and close proximity to San Francisco, would be compelled to adopt a planning method.

He urged the supervisors to take the planning business under careful advisement, and suggested that they consider the oppointment of a commission, composed of men familiar with planning work rather than of politicians. He cited the work being done in Santa Barbara county as well worth the attention of the San Mateo county supervisors in building their foundation.

District Attorney Swart told the board that County Surveyor George A. Kneese had done more perhaps than anyone in the county toward planning for future development. He added that County Surveyor Kneese had attempted to bring order out of chaos by keeping a standard of development in laying out new subdivisions about the county.

This, District Attorney Swart said, would prove of invaluable aid to the supervisors when they were ready to inaugurate county planning. He cited the County Surveyor's efforts to keep some sort of harmony in development as a laudable endeavor, and urged developers generally to follow the plan.

In elaborating on the District Attorney's statements, County Surveyor Kneese said that when he first came into office twelve years ago he saw the necessity of endeavoring to keep new realty developments to some definite standards. Looking ahead, he said, it was not difficult to forsee that at some distant day the county would be compelled to adopt zoning and development protective measures.

With this in mind, the County Surveyor said, he had attempted to keep developments all over the county in some sort of harmony that would make it easier for future development along restricted lines. This was difficult in many cases, he cited, because of the absence of legislation to force adherence to a definite scheme of things, but he believed much had been achieved despite this.

Aside from the burden it will lift from the shoulder of county planners of the future County Surveyor Kneese pointed out that it will be found to have been a decided economy to property owners. Those who have adhered to this scheme will discover when planning becomes a legislative measure, that they have been spared large sums of money, that their property conforms without alteration to the plan of development that will be law in the near future, he concluded.

WHAT HIS HOME TOWN THINKS OF McGOVERN

The following is taken from the South San Francisco Enterprise:

If there is any one condidate in the coming elections whom we can endorse without qualification, that man is Dr. J. C. McGovern for the office of Coroner and Public Administrator. It is fitting that Dr. McGovern's career should be rounded out by public recognition of his long record of public service in public and private life. Dr. McGovern has been associated with practically every project for the progress of South San Francisco in the twenty-seven years that he has lived here. He has been president of the Chamber of Commerce, Exchange club, and was the founder of the South San Francisco Community Chest, the only organization of its kind in the county.

He established Califorina's first free dental clinic for school children right here in South San Francisco, and the countless good turns he has done makes him eminently fitted for the position of Boy Scout Troop committeeman, which he now holds here.

It is maintained by Dr. McGovern's opposition that certain special qualifications are necessary for the office of coroner. Physicians and surgeons maintain that a doctor should hold the position, yet when the cause of death is to be determined by autopsy, a physician is always called in and would be called in even though the coroner was a doctor. To elect an undertaker as a coroner is to invite jealousy between morticians for public business. In our opinion, a good sound mind and an acquaintance with the routine of the office are the only essentials. Dr. McGovern has those qualifications.

In his work as Public Administrator, the officer is governed largely by his attorney. Possibly the ideal coroner and public administrator would be both physician and lawyer, but such a man would be so aged by the time he finished his training in the two professions that senile dementia might disqualify him.

As far as qualifications are concerned, it stands us in good stead to remember that Dr. McGovern has made good on the job. There can be no better qualification.

An improved working model showing the relative size and movements of the sun, earth and moon has been made for use in schools and colleges.

SALT LAKE NOW TWO DAY DRIVE

The trip from San Francisco to Salt Lake City may be made in two days, according to L. L. Norris, director of touring, National Automobile Club. The publisher of the Record can confirm this statement, as he made the trip in that time in June. This means long days, however, not an eight hour day, and it necessitates a high hourly average over the good sections of the road.

The roads from San Francisco to Reno are in excellent condition, with the exception of about five miles of construction near Emigrant Gap, where some delay may be encountered. This stretch is rough and slows down the driving time. The balance is in good condition.

Excellent oiled gravel highway will be traversed from Reno to Lovelock, with the exception of eight miles of fair gravel across the Humboldt Sink. The first eight miles out of Lovelock are in good condition, being oiled gravel highway, but from that point twenty-two miles of very rough and corrugated highway will be encountered. New highway is under construction and traffic is routed over the old road the greater part of the distance, but due to lack of maintenance work on the old road and exceedingly heavy traffic, it has become very badly corrugated. It is anticipated that the new road will be completed and open to traffic during this month.

From the end of the construction, excellent oiled gravel road is traversed into Winnemucca.

Leaving Winnemucca, there are twenty-eight miles of good graded gravel, thence oiled gravel into Battle Mountain. Forty-eight miles of excellent graded gravel leaving Battle Mountain, with good oiled gravel into Carlin. Short stretches of this road are being resurfaced, necessitating a few short detours. Oiled gravel from the end of the resurfacing into Elko, thence splendid wide graded gravel highway to Wendover.

From Wendover to Salt Lake City, 132 miles, the first thirty-eight miles across the salt beds are fair to good graded gravel. The next forty-one miles will be found quite rough, some loose gravel and about three miles of construction where the road is being resurfaced. From this point to Grantsville, sixteen miles, while a wide graded gravel road, is badly pitted and with many chuck holes, necessitatng careful driving. Fair to good oiled gravel to a point ten miles beyond Grantsville, thence pavement into Salt Lake City.

REDWOOD HIGHWAY LINK COMPLETED

An important link in the Redwood highway was completed when the new alignment, just north of San Rafael, was thrown open to traffic on July 26. Although only 1.8 miles in length, this section of highway saves more than a third of a mile in distance over the previous alignment. Starting at the northerly limits of San Rafael, the new road connects at Gallinas Creek with the recently constructed pavement to Ignacio.

The new project has been paved with Portland cement concrete and bituminous macadam for a width of thirty feet on a fifty foot graded roadbed for the first half mile out of San Rafael, being paved the remaining distance to a twenty foot width on a forty foot roadbed.

This new link is a part of the nearly completed major plan of relocation and widening of the Redwood highway between Sausalito and Santa Rosa, which, when finished, will net a saving of approximately five miles between these two cities, with a great saving in time as well.

It is said that the Sheiks of Morocco are buying large American automobiles in which to take the ladies of their harems riding. We warn them that it is dangerous to drive with one are while having the other around the harem.—Detroit News.

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the nearest Rexall Drug Store. Edwards' Drug Store, Mission street, near San Jose avenue. —Adv.

SAN FRANCISCO MAY HAVE JAIL IN SAN MATEO COUNTY

San Francisco county may erect a new jail in San Mateo county to replace the old Ingleside jail, which is considered unsafe. Proposals for the construction of a jail at a site in the northern part of San Mateo county is being considered by the San Francisco supervisors. Several sites are now under consideration. William Fitzgerald, sheriff of San Francisco county, has recommended that a bond issue of $850,000 be placed on the November ballot in San Francisco for the construction of the new jail.

This will include dormitories to house 600 persons, at a cost of about $600,000, and a hospital wing and the necessary land costing $250,000 more. The law requires that the matter be put before the people for approval in the form of a bond issue, the supervisors were advised.

MEETS HORRIBLE DEATH IN FALL IN SAND BUNKER

Clifford H. Pinkham, worker at the plant of the Redwood Building Material Company, met a terrible death last Friday when he fell into a sand bunker at the plant, and was buried in the sand. The man was working at clearing out a chute which had become clogged. He lost his footing and fell into the pit, where he was quickly buried by the shifting sand. Workmen, hearing his scream for help as he fell, hurried to his assistance and called the Redwood City fire department. By means of ladders, ropes and shovel the body of Pinkham was finally recovered, but not until he had been buried for an hour.

SHOULD APPRECIATE OUTSTANDING SERVICE

Eliabeth M. Kneese has held the office of County Clerk for twelve years, and in all that period can be said without exaggeration to have fully satisfied the electorate of our flourishing community. In a few days now an opportunity presents itself of demonstrating to the County Clerk that her efforts have been appreciated. She should be returned to her office by the handsomest of majorities, and indications from every section of the county are to that effect. Primary election day, Tuesday, August 26, is close at hand. Do not forget County Clerk Kneese on that Tuesday.

Throughout her service to the county the popular official has worked under the direction of Judge George H. Buck, who has been a lifelong friend. Judge Buck strongly favors returning County Clerk Kneese to office. That is a factor in the coming contest that thinking citizens should give much consideration. Judge Bucks' opinion is based on careful observation of the performance of the duties of the important office. No one's judgment could be of more value.

It has been justly pointed out by the legion of friends of the County Clerk that in addition to winning the commendation of Judge Buck, she has been given the unsolicited endorsement of attorneys who practice in the Superior Court. Many cases involving immense properties are handled in the San Mateo county court and nearly all of the most prominent attorneys of the state appear at one time or another at its bar. It is such outstanding men that have accorded County Clerk Kneese the signal honor of unqualified commendation.

Will the gentleman who witnessed the accident of a lady and her little daughter, who were knocked over by a street car at Mission street and Sickles avenue, on April 24, please ring Kearney 6650 or Delaware 1099. It is very important.

Quite Different
Teddy had lost his dog and was weeping bitterly over it.
"Oh, I feel so bad 'cos poor old Major's dead" he sobbed.
"Shucks," commented Billy, "my granny's been dead a week, and you don't catch me crying."
"Yes," moaned Ted, "but you didn't raise your granny from a pup."

We are equipped at all times to serve you in connection with repair work.

Proctor: "By the way, doctor, how is Mr. Brown getting along?"
Doctor: "I'm afraid he is losing his mind. Today he wanted to pay me in advance."

Now is the time to buy your winter coal.

Wrecked Motorist (opening his eyes): "I had the right of way, didn't I?"
Bystander: "Yeh, but the other fellow had a truck."

Hotel Clerk: "I beg your pardon, sir, what is your name?"
Guest: "My name? Didn't I just write it on the register?"
Clerk: "Yes, sir, that's what aroused my curiosity."

Every complaint is a priceless opportunity to rectify defective methods and make a firmer friend.
